0 Introduction

0.1 Purpose of this Handbook

The Handbook should help the managers of a humanitarian demining project understand the cultural, ethical and legal framework of the host country. The Guidelines developed and presented in the Handbook should promote the goodwill between the local community and the contractors that is vital for successful and efficient demining. This will assist in delivering the Project to time, cost and quality.

Throughout the Handbook, where a Guideline emerges from the narrative, its reference number is shown in the right hand margin.

0.2 Acknowledgements

The Handbook was created by Dave Usher and Irina Stănciugelu of CBRNE Ltd (www.cbrneltd.com), Stewart Grainger of BACTEC International Ltd (www.bactec.com) and Rosalind Malcolm of the University of Surrey.

The research leading to these results has received funding from the European Union Seventh Framework Programme 2007-2013 under grant agreement n° 284996. Project D-BOX – A demining tool-box for humanitarian clearing of large-scale areas from anti-personnel landmines and cluster munitions [Ref 1].

1 Scope

Our intention in this Handbook is to promote an awareness of the cultural issues that might be of significance to all humanitarian demining projects. However, we appreciate the difficulties of attempting to embrace in a single Handbook the religious and cultural requirements of all the communities of the world.

The state of government in countries where demining is carried out can range from completely broken down at all levels to fully functioning, with effective policing of law and order. The Handbook is intended for use whatever the extent and effectiveness of national governance.

The Handbook also incorporates the human development goals of the UN.

We present the Handbook in English, being the language most commonly used in the demining industry.
