Introduction

Dental extraction forceps are used for the extraction of teeth. The majority of extraction forceps are for use on both sides and for more than one tooth, e.g. for all upper or lower premolars, for upper central incisors and upper canines (and larger lateral incisors), for upper lateral incisors and for upper deciduous incisors and canines. Some extraction forceps for upper molars and some extraction forceps for lower third molars are specially designed for the type of tooth and the side concerned. Some extraction forceps are only for roots.

In order that the dentist and/or his assistant can order the correct extraction forceps for an intended clinical purpose a global designation system is necessary.

General requirements and test methods for extraction forceps are specified in ISO 9173-1.
